Zeppelins have come to the rescue of

German shipping in the Baltic, where British submarines were threatening to establish a complete blockade.

The ore-laden German steamship Scotia, bound from Sweden to a German port, was mentioned in reports from Denmark to-day as having encountered one of these submarines off the Danish Island of Bornholm and signalled to a Zeppelin which steered at full speed for the scene, forcing the undersea boat to submarge.

Confidence is felt that the German air craft will end the enemy submarines' Baltic activity entirely. British submarines were threatening
